

Southeast Asian Ceramic Society

Our new publication, Southeast Asian Ceramics: New Light on Old Pottery accompanies the exhibition of the same name, held at the National University of Singapore Museum (14 November 2009 - 25 July 2010). In this present volume, notable archaeologist and scholar John N. Miksic reconstructs a vivid image of the development of Southeast Asia's unique ceramic technology. Along with three contributing authors, Miksic summarises the fruits of the research of the last 40 years, beginning with the founding of the Southeast Asian Ceramic Society in Singapore in 1969. The result is a comprehensive and insightful overview of the technology, aesthetics and organisation, both economic and political, of seemingly diverse territories in pre-colonial Southeast Asia.

Summary of Contents:
